CCPC Survey of Communist China and North Korea

1. Definition of Critical Intelligence Problem

List and describe briefly (under headings political, military, scientific/technical and economic) subjects which in the view of your department or agency are of critical national intelligence interest concerning Communist China and North Korea.

2. Definition of Critical Gaps in Information

Describe in as much detail as necessary the outstanding deficiencies in information in subjects listed in Section 1 above.

3. Intelligence Collection Programs

List and describe briefly the intelligence collection programs for which your agency has primary operational responsibility now (or soon to be) directed against Communist China and North Korea. In describing each facility (or group of facilities having the same general mission) describe its function, tasking, location, manpower requirements, volume of material handled, and cost (including initial outlay, maintenance and support costs).

4. Analysis of Collection Guidance

In this section your comments are requested on the overall quality of collection guidance currently provided by the community against the subjects of critical intelligence interest listed in Section 2 above.

Comments should include statements as appropriate on adequacy of (a) current requirements; (b) technical guidance and operational support materials; (c) assessment and evaluation of collected data; and
(d) effectiveness of feedback techniques.

5. Intelligence Research and Exploitation

Under this heading described briefly the program your department is now following to research and exploit all source information concerning the critical areas listed in Section 1 above. Include in your statement any shortages in manpower and research skills (e.g., language deficiencies, dissemination, and data processing problems) within your own organization or in other elements of the community which in your judgment have a debilitating effect on your and/or the community handling of the problem.
